

As interest rates rise, investors look to floating-rate funds

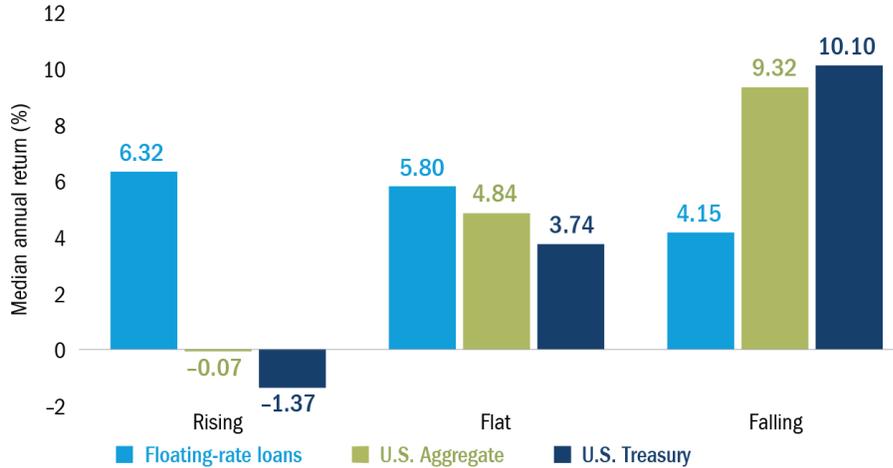

April 4, 2022

The appeal of floating-rate loans usually peaks when interest rates are rising. But they may help diversify portfolios in any environment.

Floating-rate loans are known by many names, including bank loans, senior loans and leveraged loans. They're typically extended to companies with higher levels of debt relative to cash flow, and because of this, they carry greater credit risk than investment-grade bonds. But unlike traditional bonds, floating-rate loans don't make a fixed-interest payment, or coupon, each period. Instead, their coupons reset every 30 or 90 days, floating up or down with the changes in prevailing interest rates. This floating feature makes loan prices less sensitive to shifts in interest rates, so flows into floating-rate loan funds tend to increase when the Federal Reserve is actively raising rates in response to a growing economy and improved labor market. And, as you can guess, this trend tends to reverse when rates are falling.

Historically, floating-rate loans have outperformed in rising and flat interest-rate environments. When rates are rising, the median annual return for floating-rate loans, as gauged by the Credit Suisse Leveraged Loan Index, has exceeded the return on U.S. Treasuries and the Bloomberg U.S. Aggregate Bond Index by more than 6 percentage points. But what's possibly overlooked is that floating-rate loans have also delivered attractive absolute and relative performance regardless of the broader interest-rate environment. Because yield is such a significant component of total return, floating-rate loans also have outperformed U.S. Treasuries and the Bloomberg Aggregate Bond Index when rates are flat. It's only when rates fall that we have seen floating-rate loans underperform.

▶ Floating-rate loans in rising, flat and falling rate environments

Source: Credit Suisse and Bloomberg Indices. "Rising" indicated by an increase of more than 50 bps. "Falling" indicated by a decrease of more than 50 bps. Data reflects rolling 12-month periods from 01/31/93 through 12/31/21. Past performance is not a guarantee of future results.

Floating-rate loans may add diversification in any interest-rate environment.

Although their interest-rate-related benefits are what drive investors' flows into and out of the asset class, floating-rate loans can help diversify a portfolio at any time — and this benefit can be overlooked. Most of the return in floating-rate loans comes from their exposure to credit risk (exposure to corporations), while the Bloomberg U.S. Aggregate Bond Index gets most of its return from duration risk (interest-rate sensitivity). So, historically they've had low correlation to each other and behave differently in different market environments.

Bottom line

Floating-rate loans are popular when interest-rates are rising, but they may have diversification benefits in any interest rate environment.

FEBRUARY 2022

DIVERSIFY YOUR FIXED-INCOME PORTFOLIO WITH FLOATING-RATE LOANS

Highlights

- Floating-rate loans may add diversification to any interest-rate environment
- Provide asset value if floating-rate loans
- Attractive returns in the short-term

The appeal of floating-rate loans usually grows when interest rates are rising, but they may help diversify your portfolio in any environment — and this benefit can be overlooked. Most of the return in floating-rate loans comes from their exposure to credit risk (exposure to corporations), while the Bloomberg U.S. Aggregate Bond Index gets most of its return from duration risk (interest-rate sensitivity). So, historically they've had low correlation to each other and behave differently in different market environments. So, historically they've had low correlation to each other and behave differently in different market environments. So, historically they've had low correlation to each other and behave differently in different market environments.

Introduction to Floating-rate loans

What are floating-rate loans?

As their name implies, floating-rate loans are debt instruments. Floating-rate loans are known by many names, including bank loans, senior loans and leveraged loans. They are a form of debt financing typically originated between a group of banks, known as a syndicate, and a corporate entity.

Floating-rate loans are typically extended to companies with higher levels of debt relative to cash flow and, consequently, carry greater credit risk than investment-grade bonds. Unlike floating-rate loans, which invest in investment-grade quality, they are generally senior in the capital structure and secured by the borrower's assets, resulting in higher recovery rates than non-investment-grade in the event of default. Unlike traditional bonds, floating-rate loans do not make a fixed interest payment, or coupon, each period. Instead, floating-rate loan coupons vary based on prevailing interest rates. The coupon consists of two components: a spread and a floating reference rate. The spread generally remains static over the life of the loan and is based on the borrower's credit quality as well as market factors such as risk appetite, liquidity and the default environment. However, the reference rate resets every 30 to 90 days. Floating-rate loans show less sensitivity to changes in short-term interest rates, although the rate on the loan does reset periodically. This floating feature also makes loan prices less sensitive to changes in interest rates.

© 2022 Columbia Threadneedle Investments. All rights reserved. This document is not a prospectus. For more information, please contact your advisor.

Get the white paper

DISCLOSURES

Bloomberg Index Services Limited. BLOOMBERG® is a trademark and service mark of Bloomberg Finance L.P. and its affiliates (collectively “Bloomberg”). Bloomberg owns all proprietary rights in the Bloomberg Indices. Bloomberg does not approve or endorse this material, or guarantee the accuracy or completeness of any information herein, or make any warranty, express or implied, as to the results to be obtained therefrom and, to the maximum extent allowed by law, shall not have any liability or responsibility for injury or damages arising in connection therewith.

The Bloomberg U.S. Aggregate Bond Index is a market-value-weighted index that tracks the daily price, coupon, pay-downs and total return performance of fixed-rate, publicly placed, dollar-denominated and non-convertible investment-grade debt issues with at least $250 million par amount outstanding and with at least one year to final maturity.

The Credit Suisse Leveraged Loan Index tracks the investable market of the U.S.-dollar-denominated leveraged loan market. It consists of issues rated “5B” or lower, meaning that the highest rated issues included in this index are Moody’s/S&P ratings of Baa1/BB+ or a1/BBB+. All loans are funded term loans with a tenor of at least one year and are made by issuers domiciled in developed countries.

Indices shown are unmanaged and do not reflect the impact of fees. It is not possible to invest directly in an index.

To find out more, call 800.426.3750
or visit columbiathreadneedle.com

Not Federally Insured	No Financial Institution Guarantee	May Lose Value
------------------------------	---	-----------------------

The views expressed are as of the date given, may change as market or other conditions change and may differ from views expressed by other Columbia Management Investment Advisers, LLC (CMIA) associates or affiliates. Actual investments or investment decisions made by CMIA and its affiliates, whether for its own account or on behalf of clients, may not necessarily reflect the views expressed. This information is not intended to provide investment advice and does not take into consideration individual investor circumstances. Investment decisions should always be made based on an investor's specific financial needs, objectives, goals, time horizon and risk tolerance. Asset classes described may not be appropriate for all investors. Past performance does not guarantee future results, and no forecast should be considered a guarantee either. Since economic and market conditions change frequently, there can be no assurance that the trends described here will continue or that any forecasts are accurate.

Securities products offered through Columbia Management Investment Distributors, Inc., member FINRA. Advisory services provided by Columbia Management Investment Advisers, LLC.

Columbia Threadneedle Investments (Columbia Threadneedle) is the global brand name of the Columbia and Threadneedle group of companies.